An American Explorer. THE EXPEDITION SENT OUT BY A WESTERN

COLLEGE-A QUEER CRAFT.

[From the New Orleans Picayune.] One day this week a strange craft touched the Morgan City wharf, having a curious cargo and an odd commander. It was a common skiff, upon which was erected a rude framework of lumber, between two and three feet in height above the sides, and three feet in height above the sides, and three feet in height above the sides, serving the purposes of a cabin. Through it projected a small stovepipe, looking very much like the smoke-stack of a diminutive steamer. The cargo consisted of a few rustic chairs different varieties of wood, pieces of sandstone, volcanic quartz, Indian arrows, and pottery, etc., gathered at various points in Southern Louisiana, especially for a coffege at or near Keokuk, Iowa. The commander was a square-built, bronze-faced man, probably upward of fifty years of age, named W. P. Hall. He did not seek notoriety apparently, and merely stopped at this place to forward and receive letters and take aboard supplies. Mr. Hall started from Keokuk, In., in Oo tober, 1876, in an open skiff in search for prehistoric relies in the southern States. During a small portion of the Journey he slept on shore at night, and during the remainder on board. He followed the Atchafalaya to the residence of anold indian chief named Page Iunitar where he storred to all goods warranted as represented. A trial wid named Pere Jupiter, where he stopped to procure valuable information. The chief, now probably eighty years old, as familiar means the stopped to procure valuable information. A THRILLING EPISODE IN A WESTERN NEWSPAPER OFFICE. - We don't wish to say much about it, but even a skirmish with an editor must be written up. After reading our article last week Dr. Bently came and interviewed us. He brought a few friends along to see him eat us up, with his hands tied behind him. He did not like the reading of our last article, and we don't blame him, for there were a few sayings in it which were a little severe. But he locked arms with us, and we waltzed around the room with him to the tune of high words, and to the infinite delight of the spectators

His hands were not tied very tight, either. There were numerous chairs and other furniture in the room, which were speedity demolished and put out of the way. The Doctor got frantic and kicked over a twogallon jug of ink, which, of course, we didn't like, because it was new ink, and, besides, it spoiled the looks of the floor. We took the Doctor for a sponge, and mopped the ink up as quickly as possible. That's what made the Doctor mad. He then shoved us over a chair and we rolled around for a while, and then we began to feel like fight, and we den't doubt but what we would have had a quarrel very soon, but the Doctor suddenly concluded he didn't care whether we took back what we said or not, and as there was not any prospect of our taking it back right off, he concluded to quit just as we had got ready to begin. After the whole affair was over we felt
